

Viewing China as a strategic partner, an economic competitor and a systemic rival, the EU's stance on China has shifted dramatically in recent years, ...

As of mid-2025, EU-China relations had reached what European Commission President Ursula von der Leyen described as an "inflection point," reflecting the European Union's growing skepticism over ...

China's bid to support authoritarianism abroad while engaging liberal democracies at home is no longer tenable. The European Union, facing its own geopolitical moment, is moving ...

European policies on China are shaped by four major geopolitical trends: intensifying US-China competition, uncertainty about sustained US ...

Security implications of China-owned critical infrastructure in the European Union threaten sovereignty. Entities linked to the Chinese party-state can gain access to and exert influence on assets vital to ...

For Europe, China has morphed from a purely foreign and economic issue to an overall challenge for the prosperity and stability of European societies. The expression "systemic rivalry" ...

The future trajectory of China-Europe relations will depend on three key dynamics: Europe's internal political evolution, the spillover effects of U.S. policies, and China's strategic ...

Viewing China as a strategic partner, an economic competitor and a systemic rival, the EU's stance on China has shifted dramatically in recent years, owing to trade tensions, security...

Breaking news, analysis and opinion on relations between China and the European Union, covering trade, investment, policy, the Belt and Road Initiative and wider issues such as the ...

China is hoping to secure new allies for a future multipolar world order as the partnership between the US and the European powers slides into a crisis.

In this timeline, we aim to capture key milestones and developments that shape EU-China ties. The European Parliament elections, held between June 6 and June 9, 2024, have ...

The future trajectory of China-Europe relations will depend on three key dynamics: Europe's internal political evolution, the spillover effects of U.S. ...

European policies on China are shaped by four major geopolitical trends: intensifying US-China competition,

Matching China and Europe

uncertainty about sustained US engagement in Europe and globally, China's ...

Web: <https://www.maxtools.co.za>

